

Hot-applied thermoplastic road marking materials

Part 3. Specification for application of material to road surfaces

ICS 93.080.30

Foreword

This British Standard has been prepared under the direction of the Road Engineering Standards Policy Committee. It is published in three Parts:

- Part 1. Specification for constituent materials and mixtures
- Part 2. Specification for road performance
- Part 3. Specification for application of material to road surfaces

This Part of BS 3262 replaces BS 3262 : Part 3 : 1987 which is withdrawn.

There have been many changes in materials and methods of laying since the first issue of this standard in 1960 and the basis of the standard has been changed to include performance requirements. Part 1 specifies the composition and quality control requirements of mixtures. Part 2 specifies the performance requirements for type approval of the materials when applied to the road surface. This Part specifies the requirements for the application of the material to the road surfaces.

This edition introduces technical changes to bring the standard up-to-date but it does not reflect a full review of the standard, which will be undertaken in due course.

In this new edition, requirements for black thermoplastic material are now included as are extruded road markings which have become widely used.

It has been assumed in the drafting of this British Standard that the execution of its provisions is entrusted to appropriately qualified and experienced people.

This standard was confirmed in November 1995 on publication of Amendment No. 1. The changes incorporated did not reflect a full review of the standard but were felt necessary to maintain its currency for the foreseeable future pending its withdrawal and supersession by European Standards currently in preparation. Amendment No. 2 published in November 1998 deleted appendix A.

A British Standard does not purport to include all necessary provisions of a contract. Users of British Standards are responsible for their correct application.

Compliance with a British Standard does not of itself confer immunity from legal obligations.
